A FIELD GUIDE FROM PERSEVERANT DIGITAL · FOR ELECTIVE HEALTHCARE

The Seminar Seat-to-Client Playbook

Plan an educational seminar or webinar that fills seats, gets registrants to actually show up, and turns the people in the room into booked consultations.

THE SHORT ANSWER · 60 WORDS

REVIEWED OCTOBER 15, 2026

Educational seminars and webinars still work when the decision is large and the buyer wants to learn before talking to anyone. Pick a topic phrased as the question your audience already has, promote two to three weeks out, send reminders by email and consented text, teach without pressure, and call every attendee within 72 hours to book the next conversation.

Is an event right for your business?

An event is worth the effort when the decision is large, the buyer wants to learn before talking to anyone, and you have someone who can teach in plain language. People are not only searching to find you; they are searching to understand you. A good event lets them do that in an hour.

- [ ] Buyers hesitate for weeks or months because the decision costs or matters a lot.
- [ ] You have a presenter who explains clearly and does not oversell.
- [ ] You can name one next step, such as a consultation, a home assessment or a tour.
- [ ] Someone can call every attendee within a day or two.

All four checked means an event is worth a trial. Otherwise, fix the gaps first.

What this looks like for elective practices

Implant, LASIK, orthodontic and cosmetic seminars let patients meet the doctor and hear the whole process before booking a consultation. These are elective, often self-paid decisions, and people want recovery, cost and risk explained plainly first.

Interest is there. The American Society of Plastic Surgeons reported on September 1, 2026 that cosmetic surgical procedure volume rose 7% in 2025. On the dental side, the ADA Health Policy Institute reported in October 2025 that capacity is opening up and dentists are less busy. An event can fill open chair time with people who already understand the treatment.

The constraints are about data, not demand. Use a registration form that asks for contact details only, reminder texts that never name a procedure, and ad audiences never built from patient lists.

What topic will actually fill seats?

Phrase the topic as the question your audience already asks, not as your service name. A title that names their worry fills seats. Rewrite these in the words your clients use on the phone.

Specialty	Topic phrased as the audience's question
Dental implants	What full-arch implants involve, from first visit to final teeth
LASIK	Is LASIK right for your eyes? Questions to ask before you decide
Plastic surgery	What recovery from a facelift really looks like
Orthodontics	Clear aligners or braces: what adults should ask before treatment
Med spa	Cosmetic treatments: what is involved, who should perform them and what to ask

Question my clients ask most	Who asks it	Could I teach it in 45 minutes? (Y/N)

Should it be in person, a webinar or both?

Go in person when trust is the main barrier and the audience is local. Go webinar when the audience is spread out or busy. Choose hybrid only if you can staff two rooms at once.

Factor	In person	Webinar	Hybrid
Builds trust	Fastest	Moderate	Strong in the room only
Cost per attendee	Higher	Lower	Highest to run well
Biggest risk	Empty seats you paid for	Low live attendance	Neither audience gets full attention

Judge any format by cost per booked consultation, not cost per registration.

What does the 21-day timeline look like?

Promote two to three weeks out, as ON24, an enterprise webinar platform, advised on November 26, 2025. ON24 also advises reminders one week, one day and 15 minutes before; we add a confirmation and a morning-of message for local events.

Day	Task	Done
−28	Pick topic, date, venue or platform, and presenter	[ ]
−24	Build the registration page (checklist below) and confirmation email with a calendar link	[ ]
−21	Test reminders end to end; launch ads, email your list, send partners a blurb to forward	[ ]
−14	Second email; review cost per registration and cut what is not working	[ ]
−7	One-week reminder (email, text optional) with one thing they will learn	[ ]
−3	Rehearse; confirm room, tech and staff	[ ]
−1	One-day reminder (email and text) with time, place or link, parking or tech note	[ ]
0	Morning-of and 15-minute texts with the address or link; run the event	[ ]
+1 to +3	72-hour follow-up (below)	[ ]

- [ ] Headline that repeats the topic question, with date, time and place above the form
- [ ] Three bullets on what attendees will learn, and a short factual presenter bio
- [ ] Form: name, email, phone, and an unchecked text-consent box that says they can reply STOP
- [ ] A plain line that the event is educational and nobody will be pressured

Do not ask about health conditions or procedures, keep third-party tracking off scheduling pages, and never name a procedure in a reminder text.

How many registrations do you actually need?

Work backward from the seats you want filled.

Seats wanted ÷ show rate = registrations needed Registrations needed ÷ page conversion rate = clicks needed Clicks needed × cost per click = estimated ad budget

Example numbers, not benchmarks. For 30 people in the room at a 50% show rate, you need 60 registrations. At 15% page conversion, that is 400 clicks. At $2.50 per click, about $1,000 in ads.

For context, ON24 reported a 60% average registrant-to-attendee rate in its 2025 data (June 19, 2026). That is a vendor figure drawn mostly from B2B enterprise webinars, not a target.

Line	Your number
Seats wanted
Expected show rate
Registrations needed
Page conversion rate
Clicks needed
Cost per click
Estimated ad budget
Consultations booked
Ad budget ÷ consultations booked

Run the last line after every event. It tells you whether to keep going.

What should happen during and after the event?

Teach first and name one next step. Answer the title question in the first ten minutes, leave 15 minutes for questions, and explain exactly what happens in the consultation, assessment or tour. End with a feedback card or poll: “Would you like someone to call you?” yes or no.

Then move fast. In Harvard Business Review research on online leads (March 2011), firms that contacted leads within an hour were nearly seven times as likely to qualify them as firms that waited longer. Attendees are warmer than web leads, but the clock still applies.

When	Attendees	Registered no-shows
Same day	Thank-you email with a summary and booking link	Replay or next date
Day 1	Call everyone who said yes on the card	Text (with consent) offering the replay
Day 2	Call remaining attendees once	Second email with one key point
Day 3	Email anyone not reached with a booking link	Invite to the next event

Track each attendee in one list: attended, wants a call, called, booked, became a client.

What compliance items apply?

Check these before launch. This is general information, not legal advice.

- Tracking and PHI. HHS guidance still covers tracking on portals, scheduling and other pages that transmit protected health information; vendors handling it need a business associate agreement.
- Meta limits. Meta's health and wellness restrictions can block optimizing toward scheduling, with in-app lead forms affected least (Search Engine Land, March 11, 2025).
- Health claims. Keep procedure and recovery claims factual. No promised results.
- Texting. The TCPA still requires prior express written consent for autodialed marketing texts. Since April 11, 2025, people can revoke by any reasonable means, such as replying STOP, and opt-outs must be honored within 10 business days (Kelley Drye; Burr & Forman).
- Email. CAN-SPAM covers B2B email too: accurate headers, a postal address and opt-outs honored within 10 business days (FTC). Bulk Gmail senders also need SPF, DKIM and DMARC (Google, February 1, 2024).

Where do most owners get stuck?

> Filling seats at a sane cost. The first event shows your real cost per registration. Lowering it takes testing topics, audiences and creative across several events before the money runs out.

> Reminder automation across email and text. A sequence that pulls from your form, respects text consent, honors STOP and stops for cancellations takes systems work most teams do not have time for.

> Measuring results without patient data. Proving which seminar produced which consultations, while keeping health details out of ad platforms and analytics, takes careful tracking design and a signed agreement with every vendor involved.
